

short blurb

I want to express "gifts and gains" through this short story. When we see a little girl crying, we choose to offer comfort by giving gifts, and she will give us a flower. Most importantly, she stops crying. I provided two interactive options, giving her candy or a ring, and in the end, I could exchange her flowers and a smile. What I want to express is that by offering kindness, we will also reap kindness. Rings and candies come at different prices, but kindness is always priceless.